Artist's Statement:

I have been sewing since my grandmother taught me to embroider at age 6. My mother taught me to love handwork and crafts. My father, a noted Cleveland architect, taught me to love color, line and pattern. Quilting is my way of combining my heritage, my interests and my reactions to the world.

Patriotic colors and themes are a particular favorite of mine, and recently I've found myself returning to the flag as a way to comment on current affairs.

Patchwork quilting has roots in Egypt, China and medieval Europe. Now it is also considered as one of the truly original American art forms. Quilts are frequently used as a metaphor for America, with our country's incredible variety of traditions and immigrant cultures, all blending together into one big, harmonious whole.
