The Commercial Art Designs of Judith Raices Turning Artwork into Household Products

Judith Raices

Beginning in the early '70's, this Washington Heights born artist has worked with over sixty-five business clients to design patterns for the products they hoped to sell in our department stores and supermarkets.

She is a commercial artist. Her patterns are on clothes, carpets and area rugs, on beddings and linens, wall coverings, paper goods, and cosmetic packaging, as well as on giftware and dinnerware.

As a member of the Graphic Artists Guild, earning a living required her to develop a professional attitude, using signed contracts that protected her creativity. Join us as she gives a special artist's talk at the May 4th opening reception. Exhibit ends June 28th.
