Laura Twersky - Photographer The Nature Connection

"In nature nothing exists alone" – Rachel Carson, Silent Spring

Laura Twersky Stempel is a biology professor and a nature photographer. She received her Ph.D. in cell and developmental biology from NY University. As a professor at Saint Peter's University, she has mentored undergraduate research projects through classes, an environmental club, and a chapter of a national biology honor society.

Her published research includes the developmental effects of environmental endocrine disruptor/microplastics, as well as the dietary effects of calcium and other factors. Her undergraduate research at Barnard College introduced her to photography using an electron microscope to visualize subcellular structures. She has been in group exhibitions at the NY Public Library, Wave Hill and elsewhere. Laura hopes to encourage conservation by sharing photographs of our awesome natural world.
